Your Doctor. Your Health.

Steven C. Bergin, MD

Wisconsin Medical Society President Steven C. Bergin, MD, is a full-time obstetrician-gynecologist practicing at the Aspirus Weston Clinic and the Aspirus Wausau Hospital. He is board certified in obstetrics and gynecology. His practice interests are high-risk obstetrics and urogynecology/pelvic floor reconstruction. He previously practiced at the former Rice Medical Center in Stevens Point.

In addition to serving as Society president, Dr. Bergin also serves on the Board of Directors for Wisconsin Medical Society Foundation and WISMedPAC. He has served on the Society's Board of Directors for nine years, and has also served on numerous committees and task forces. He also currently serves as Secretary/Treasurer of the Portage County Medical Society, and he is a member of the American Medical Association and AMPAC.

Doctor Bergin received his bachelor's degree from the University of Wisconsin Pharmacy School. He received his medical degree from the Medical College of Wisconsin and completed his obstetrics-gynecology residency at Milwaukee County General, where he remained on staff as a clinical instructor in obstetrics and gynecology prior to pursuing private practice in Stevens Point.

Doctor Bergin's community service has included being a charter member of the Portage County Child Passenger Safety Association and serving on the Portage County United Way Board. He also has been on the board and served as president of the Monteverdi Master Chorale. More recently, he has been on the board and served as president of the Central Wisconsin Symphony. His service to Troop 298, Boy Scouts of America, has included Merit Badge Counselor, Troop Committee Member and High Adventure Coordinator.

Doctor Bergin and his wife of 38 years, Susan, reside in Stevens Point. They have three adult children: one daughter and two sons.
